But the golden apples are all WLSs. Theirs is the Alpha and the Omega of all the bucolic revues. Potentially theirs is the last roundup for hillbilly talent, and artists of this type who have not faced its microphones are still on the Irruge of the best yokel society.

considering that the Barn Dance has been such a success, it is interesting to know that the roots of the program go down into the soil of the 1920-1921 collapse. It was literally born of Depression out of Depairs, had in the days when Sears Roebusk and Company had been successed to the American Armer. So its destiny definitely was linked with that of the man who worked the ground and raised the esentials to national livelihood, and the soil of th

They accepted the gratuity with doubtful reactions, but they took quick recognition of the entertaining the station of the control of the entertaining took their minds off the sliding proposities of grain prices. Then—the miracle.

Source of the actual inspiration for the rendering, one Saturday night, of some of the homely ditties of the part, is obscure. But some one played Turkey in the part, is obscure. That problem still exists today.

If a lone listener is permitted to hazard a guess, let him say that it will last probably as long as the hinterlands endure. There is a sympathetic simplicity in the endless repetition of familiar songs. Following that Saturday night when the seed of the Barn Dance was planted, the rural program was elaborated and presented in the loop studies of the station. An amazing number of persons stormed the studios to see the performers in action. It landling them became a major the performers in action. Handling them became a major problem. When the station ownership changed hands in 1926 and the studios were established in the publishing company's west side Chicago plant, the listeners gave little heed to new proprietorship or locale.

They continued to come in hordes. Harassed execuand entertaining, their welcome invariably is warm. Sage management is the factor which keep them from out-weating that welcome. So, now owned and operated by the Prairie Farmer Publishing Company, the participants in the Barn Dance are a strong link with the listener. Their barn Dance are a strong link with the listener. It was the only house available for Barn Dance purposes, but a failure wouldn't particularly have dismayed WLS executives.

The answer to that is childishly simple. They stormed the portals for the opening night's two shows, and they have been repeating every Saturday night for 136 successive weeks. Merhaps one of the reasons I have such a swell time with Jack is that I am a good listener. I think part of a wife's job is to listen when her husband wants to talk about himself and what he's been doing. Jack talks exceptionally well. He manages to make the most trivial incident terribly interesting, whether it's something to do with his radio program, his show or his movie, or whether it's about his golf or something that happened down at his club.

Jack is absolutely crazy about the show business, and loves to discuss it. That's one reason I'm glad I'm

Who Is Mrs. Jack Benny

Despite what Frank Parker, Don Wilson and Don Bestor might say in public, I think—in fact I know—that Jack Benny is the grandest guy in the world. What do they know about it? They've been working with him for a little more than a year. I've been working with Jack, and have been married to him, for almost eight years. He may not be so quick to brag about it, but I am. That's my story and he's stuck with me.

Not so long ago I heard Jack telling someone that he would like to nominate me as "the Perfect Wife". I was pretty pleased about that, but then what wife wouldn't be? The reason he gave was that he once heard me say. "Whenever there's an argument, it's always my fault." I didn't make that statement because I thought it would look cute in print (not that it doesn't) but it's really the truth. After all, Jack gives me so little trouble that there's nothing to argue about.

gives me so little trouble that there's nothing to argue about.

There are one or two exceptions I'd like to make to that, however. First, there is the matter of money and business. Jack is so good-natured that, more out of the kindness of his heart than anything else, he will accept almost any kind of proposition or deal that is put up to him. I swear I think he'd sell his soul to someone if he thought he was doing them a good furn. That's where I come in, I plead guilty to being the commercially-minded one in our establishment, despite the fact that Jack is so adept at mentioning Jell-O at unexpected places during the program. Past experience has taught him to consult with me before he signs a contract. One time he decided it was silly for him to at unexpected places during the program. Past experience has taught him to consult with me before he signs a contract. One time he decided it was silly for him to depend upon the advice of a woman in business matters. It was a question of a contract to make a motion picture. I told Jack I didn't think he ought to do it. But he did, anyway. The picture was a flop. Ever since, I've had the last word.

A couple of years ago a theater manager phoned to ask Jack if he would play an engagement a few weeks later and if so, what was his price? Well, it's a good thing I was around. Jack took out a pencil and started to figure. When he had finished, I told him to ask double the amount. Jack did—and the man at the other end of the line hung up. And was Jack mad? A few minutes later the manager called back and said Jack could have the engagement. Once again the little woman marked one up on her comedian-husband.

About the only other thing I do to make Jack annoyed is to make remarks about people. He's absolutely remarkable about the way he makes friends

Why shouldn't the Bennys think that George Burns (shown above with Gracie Allen and Jack and Mary) is one of the funniest people they ever have met? The Burnses came in to play bridge—and George wound them up with a jig-saw puzzle and preparations for going to the opera with everyone he meets. It's not what you'd call a case of not being choosey. That sounds a little snobbish, doesn't it? I don't mean it that way. It just so happens that he likes people of every description and loves having them around. I do, too, but every once in a while I'll say casually in my feminine way, "Oh, Jack, I don't like so and so," or "I think such and such a person is a little dull."

Lack is very sweet about those things. He'll publications.

Jack is very sweet about those things. He'll walk over to me, put his arm around my shoulder and say, "Doll, you don't really mean that," and then point out to me why I should like the people in question. It seems to me he has a most happy faculty for being able to detect at once the good side of his fellow-men and women, no matter how thickly it may be disguised.

Fun to be a funnyman's wife? You said it. Jack is possessed of one of the most cheerful spirits I've ever seen. He never gets angry really. Suppose I don't read a line correctly in rehearsal. He tells me how it should be done. And then two or three times I do the same incorrect thing again. Most stage people and almost all not in his new play, "Bring on the Girls." If I were, he wouldn't have anything to tell me about when he came home at night, and it's such fine relaxation for him—when he has had a hard day just to sit in a comfortable chair with his leg hanging over the arm, pulling on that cigar of his. The same thing was true of the picture he was making this summer, "Trans-Atlantic Merry-Go-Round."

letter, phone call and personal representative you are informed of the new musicware, coaxed, cajoled, kidded and argued into a promise that you'll do this song or that. A definite programming date is the only answer that brings a smile of satisfaction to a publisher's representative, and an end to his campaigning.

Nor is this relationship between publisher and performer one-sided. An artist with any sense of the fitness of things realizes full well that his career depends heavily on the material he uses. The most successful singers, instrumentalists and orchestra leaders devote more time and care to keeping abreast of the new songs and the selection of those most adaptable to their work than they give to any other phase of professional life. If publishers are indebted to performers for popularizing their tunes, then no less are the performers beholden to the publishers for microphone fodder in the form of songs.

Next time you listen to your pet warbler it may amuse you to picture him (or her) standing knee deep in song copies, and perspiring over the problem of picking just the right few songs to please you and fit his (or her) individuality. And back of that scene, give a thought to the boys in the publishing houses who are waiting prayerfully for your star's verdict.

Word comes to me that KATE SMITH auditioned for a food sponsor. Everything was all set but the signing on the dotted line. Kate's salary was nothing to sneeze at, but reports have it that at the last minute her manager, TED COLLINS, held out for more dough when he learned that the sponsor offered a lady of the stage (who had very little air experience) much more money, and couldn't get her. Are You Listenin'?

By Tony Wons

It is not always the heroic deeds of great warriors that give us courage. As the poet said, the song of a gay bird inspires you with courage and song to face the coming day. A poor workingman who wears out his shoes going from place to place trying to find work, but holding his head high, gives you more courage than the bloody exploits of Napoleon. A weary mother trying to make the poor ends meet of a meager wage that comes seldom in these days, biting her lips as she holds back the tears so the children will not see, gives you more courage than many a popular hero who performs his daring acts amid the playing of the bands and the applause of the crowd. And all these patient, silent ones who are waiting for the sunshine of better days, hopefully, without bitterness... they inspire us with courage and hope. with courage and hope.

Here is one of the most surprising statements I bave read in a long time: It says that a person is taller in the morning than he is the succeeding night. The explanation seems to be that the fibro-cartilage pads between the vertebrae of the spinal column relax during the night. These pads are supposed to be the shock absorbers of the body, being exposed not only to the weight of the body but also to all sorts of strains, to pounding due to walking, and to all sorts of physical exercise. Therefore, at the end of a day they are compact and dense. During the relaxation of sleep, however, they expand to their former size.

That is a good argument in favor of taking periodical rests throughout the day by sitting down or lying down a few minutes whenever you can.

I read a quotation from Lloyd George some time ago, in which he gave a pretty vivid description of what we are doing in the world—and to the world—today. Of course some of us will object and say, "the other fellow might be doing that but not I." However, the pudding proves that we are all included in this. Well, he said, "The world is becoming like a lunatic asylum run by lunatics."

As the soap box orator said when he was finishing up his argument, "Ladies and gentlemen... that's the whole kettle of fish in a nutshell."

Guess it's a case of strong eat weak, and the stronger eat the strong, and the strongest eat the stronger—and nobody survives. Conflict everywhere because a bunch of incompetents were given the management of a beautiful green earth.

You will not say that I am bragging. I hope, when I state I think I have a lot of courage. Why? I'll tell you. Because I have dared to read over the radio a poem four stanzas long and eight lines to each stanza. You think that doesn't take courage? Well, you just try it. One of the favorite slogans among radio men and practically all radio fans when they are speaking of a bit of poetry, particularly if it is good poetry, or of drama if it is the best of drama, or of music if it is something above the average . . . one of the favorite slogans in those cases is "Gut it short!"

After years of hearing that almost daily, if you still have enough ambition left to read a long poem or a bit of Shakespeare, or to play a symphony or sing a classic, you are a brave person and you should receive a medal. Of course everybody knows that you won't receive much money . . . nor will you ever have your name at the top of any contest headed "Best Radio Programs on the Air." You never will take your place with low comedians or crooners. But just the same you will be brave.

And so whatever work you happen to be en-

And so whatever work you happen to be engaged in, if you will strive to do something beautiful, not minding what the mob says or what those in the market-place say, you will be criticized. But you will receive a greater reward than the acclamation of the mob, and that is SELF-SATISFACTION!

At last I have found out what the difference between a statesman and a politician is. Of course the word "statesman" has about vanished from the average vocabulary. You hear plenty about politicians, but I don't believe I ever heard one of them called a statesman except in old books. But here is given the difference between the two terms:

A statesman wants to do something for his country.

A politican wants his country to do something for him.

A friend writes and says: "The reason why the American people, which means 125,000,000 people, are worrying and starving is that they don't know how to cooperate. Everyone is trying to go it himself. The result is that they all are pulling against one another.

Carlos Molina, bandleader whose music may be heard any evening over a CBS network. With him is shown one of his ardent fans— Lina Basquette. Molina goes to Florida soon

They will never, never get anywhere until they see that their common interests should make them as brothers. The day they can do that all their battles are won."

I suppose there is something to that. Like some-one else remarked: "Cooperation, that's the solution, Remember the banana . . . every time it leaves the bunch it gets skinned."

More of Tony Wons' homey philosophy may be heard by tuning in his program. The House by the Side of the Road, Sunday afternoons at 5:30 p. m. EST over an NBC-WEAF network. The program is sponsored by S. C. Johnson & Son

Reviewing Radio

Those sections of the listening public outside the range of WHN, where MAJOR BOWES holds forth on Tuesday nights, are being cheated out of the most novel, the funniest and the most human of radio programs. It is astonishing to me that networks and sponsors, forever in a frantic quest for something new and thrilling, have not taken The Amateur Hour of WHN and put it on a coast-to-coast basis. If they did, they would of course be forced to have Major Bowes doing the master of ceremonies honors, because really he is the show.

Listeners all over the country know the Major as a dignified, paternal and swell fellow, who moulds his Sunday programs at NBC to fit the day and the mood of people who otherwise would be in church. But few know him as the keen wit and artist repartee that he becomes on The Amateur Hour. He is as funny as ED WYNN—and the acts he stages, from the guy who makes locomotive noises with his nose, to the ham-curer who comes in from the farm to play tunes on a maple leaf, are funnier. There is no hook for the amateurs but, instead, a bell which clangs whenever an act is bad. This show staged for the whole nation would be the knockout that it already is, multiplied by fifty. Some idea of how New Yorkers like it may be had from the fact that 3,000 telephone calls are received during the hour each week, with 1,200 other callers being stalled by busy signals.

Expectant sponsors and headmen of the networks are urged to give a listen—and experience something new and engaging, at last.

There is—one of the big shots of the webs was telling me the other night—no doubt that before the season is over a radio formula will have become established, with regard to vogue of presentation and time elements. With every new show, I am assured, there will come a new note of sophistication, as portended by the work of DEEMS TAYLOR, now unfortunately off the air; of DWIGHT FISKE, the newest of the clever lads; of

By Martin J. Porter

RAY PERKINS, who last year was two years ahead of his time, and of WALTER O'KEEPE and other exponents of smart presentation.

As regards time, every major program before another year has elapsed probably will consume an hour, if it is on a weekly schedule. Already there are nine of these doing a better business than shows of lesser size. They are those of PAUL WHITEMAN, RUDY VALLEE, Showboat, The Gibson Family, the ROMBERG program, the Chase and Sanborn broadcast, the Lux Theater, and the Ford and Cadillac symphonic shows.

The Federal Trade Commission, in its movement to cull from the air any and all forms of false or misleading advertising, sent out an original call last Summer for copies of advertising scripts. Five hundred and ninety-eight stations, representing ten networks, responded, and 180,877 advertising continuities were read. Of these 22,411 were regarded as open to investigation, and they were filed away. Many of them concerned so-called remedies.

The Commission has just issued another call for sample continuities, and is specializing on the scrutiny of recordings and the advertising claims impressed on them.

Radio has been blamed for many things. There's a fellow in New York who has complained to the courts that when he crosses Times Square, radio waves cause him acute misery in his stomach. There are scores of misguided persons who wear "asbestos vests" to protect them from the waves. Thousands of farmers have complained that radio affects crops, causes droughts, gives grandpa rheumatism, and makes little Angeline to have a ringing in her ears.

Of course, all these complaints are based on superstition or awe, and recall the fellow who was called into a firehouse years ago to hear a radio program for the first time in his life. At the end of the broadcast he said: "It's a lie."

But it would be a good thing if all the fool beliefs about radio phenomena were settled. That's what the people at WOR think. When the new transmitter of that station goes on the air in December, it will have, besides the technical personnel, a corps of scientists from universities. They will conduct investigations for a year. They will ascertain, if possible, whether radio can affect human beings (in addition to driving them nuts with old jokes) whether animal or vegetable life are in any way influenced by carrier waves, etc. Radio's relationship to the weather—if any—humidity or aridity, and so on, will be delved into deeply, and a thorough report of the findings will be made.

In announcing this plan, one of the boys at WOR was set to thinking of the California doctor who, having brought several dogs back to life, now wishes to try the experiment on a human being. "Wouldn't it be swell if he could find Joe Miller's body and resurrect it?" he asked. And several listening radio comedians swooned.

FRANK BLACK wishes me to tell the world that it is a fallacy—this belief that all musicians have long hair like LEO REISMAN.

"I point with pride," he says, "to the Cadillac orchestra of a hundred pieces. Every durned one of the instrumentalists is bald."

RUDY VALLEE may be a hero to a horde of radio listeners, but he's just a guy with an automobile to Los Angeles cops. On the way to his first day of toil on his new picture Rudy bore down a bit too heavily on the accelerator and snagged a ticket from a starspangled meanie. Fine—but not so dandy.

MYRT and MARGE

By Arthur Kent

Myrt's First Theatrical Season Was One of the Craziest Whirligigs a Girl of Sixteen Had to Live Through-and She Loved It, But She Loved Far More the Handsome Young Tenor of the Troupe Whom She Was Destined Later to Marry

Radio's "Myrt and Marge" series is based upon the stage life of Myrtle Vail (mother of "Marge"—Donna Damerel Kretzinger—both on the air and in real life). Born in Joliet, Illinois, Myrt went on the stage at fifteen in Chicago—with the help of a girl friend and a newspaper reporter. The manager bired the tiny kid because she could sing and was pretty. Most vivid recollection of her long-dreamed-of stage debut is that her feet hurt! Herewith is presented bart two:

ow came 20 weeks of one-night stands, ful Myrtle lived in a dream—a shifting mare of footlights. ow came 20 weeks of one-night stands. Youthful Myrtie lived in a dream—a shifting nightmare of footlights and music and smelly dressing-rooms and cheap hotels and boarding houses and railway trains; of aching muscles and sleepy eyes. She heard the same old songs night after night. She heard tough chorus girls—not all were tough—use language she never had dreamed a woman could use.

She saw bloody, catlike dressing-room fights among the girls. She was even drawn into one of them herself! But through it all, strong and human and sweet, was the thrill and pull of show business. At the end of those 20 weeks, Myrt was a trouper forever—and had been caught up by the great love of her life.

The play was a muscular football piece called The Umpire. Those were the days of Beef Trusts, not Brain Trusts—Myrt's lack of bulk was made up by volume of voice—and in the grand finale of each show The Umpire's feminine beef was piled high on the stage in a

The Umpire's feminine beef was piled high on the stage in a scrimmage. The girls wore football suits, this being before the days of Earl Carroll! Saucy little red-headed Myrt usually was on the bottom.

"Many a grudge was worked out in those scrimmage."

"Many a grudge was worked out in those scrimmages," she tells. "Many a girl was gouged or kicked by friends. Once I came out with a broken shoulder-blade." But in ten days she was back in the heap again—which is an excellent story to tell when your Cousin Matilde wants to be an actress to express her soul.

The manager's wife didn't like Myrt. She called her a little upstart. Now Myrt was a kid—but nobody's fool. She decided that maybe—just maybe—the manager's wife liked her less because the manager might like her more.

"But I had no eyes for him," she tells. "He was a married man and I was madly, pathetically in love with George Damerel."

erel."

Now this Damerel was first tenor, and a man with a future. Handsome, fascinating, he probably had not noticed the pert redhead who sighed in the wings when he sang. For many women were mad about him—including several in the cast.

One of these was a blonde young person who believed—rightly or wrongly—that she held certain proprietary rights to the young tenor. So, while the manager's wife was jealous of Myrtle, and while the manager may or may not have given some cause for this, and while Myrt was atterly unaware that the manager existed except as the fellow who handed out orders and pay, this blonde noticed how Myrt looked at Damerel. It was a nice little theatrical mix-up, with Myrt cast in the role of innocent baby.

But this innocence aroused no

But this innocence aroused no pity in the blonde's buxom breast. One night the chorus was making up in the damp, gloomy dressing-room of a small-town theater.

"It had a stone wall," tells Myrt. "Suddenly this girl came at me, screaming and yelling. I was nearly scared to death. 'You quit looking at my George like that' she howled. Then she banged my head up against that stone wall."

Now everyone who works with Myrtle Vail testifies to her self-control. But to smack the curls of a redhead against a stone wall is going just a little too far, no matter how perfect a lady may lurk beneath those locks.

"I was so mad! forgot to be afraid! I hit her. She dug her nails into my face. I knocked her down.

Marge and her husband, Gene Kretzinger, married less than one year — and blissfully happy in their life on the air and at home and when the girls pulled me off I was jumping on her stomach! She was in no condition to go on the stage, The manager was going to fire me, but the other girls told him what had happened. Then he threatened to Myrt and her mother (Marge's Grandmother) in the domestic activity that might be seen going full blast any evening at the Vail menage fire her if she ever fouched me again."

Not only did that girl never lay hands on Myrt again, but from then on, nobody else in the company tried it, either. There were plenty of dressing-room lights, but Myrt wasn't drawn into them.

And it was shortly afterward that gorgeous George, the glamorous Damerel, (father of Donna) first noticed the tiny redhead who adored him.

It would be romantic to say that "love came to him as he saw her poised in the spotlight's glare, and his heart stood still." That's the way most of the customers think stage life goes. But it ain't so, Actually:

I had to carry a beefy girl across the stage on my back," Myrt tells with a chuckle, "and he was sorry for me because she was twice as big as I was." Such were the beginnings of love, in the life of a stage that had yet to lose its robustness!

Ever since a tiny girl, speaking her piece at church sociables. Myrt had longed for the life of the stage—the life of which her religiously brought-up mother had dreamed in vain, while her circus-riding father had had his fill of it. And how did Myrt like show business?

"I loved it!" she relates. Even the scrimmages, Youth's illusions made it a fine, brave thing to get up at five, grab breakfast, run for a six-o'clock train. There always was a mad scramble for double seats, "I learned to do most of my sleeping in day coaches," says Myrt, "with my head on a suitcase and my coat over me.

over me.

"Sometimes we'd ride on top of the train with our feet dangling while we collected scenery and cinders. People who loved life waved at us. The other kind turned up their noses." Once a pair of Hagenbeck Circus girls joined the show. "They did nothing but laugh and scratch. Soon the whole company was scratching but not laughing. Doctors (Continued on Page 23)

Jessica Dragonette Turned Aside to Go Her Own Way. Was She Right? Does She Regret?—Here Are the Facts

It was opening night of Max Reinhardt's wonder play, The Miracle. Attracted by the fanfare which had preceded the extravagant presentation, all of New York's cultured and artistic who had been able to snap up available tickets were in the audience.
It was a gala night

Near the center of the house sat one of art's greatest exponents, the somber voiced Feodor Chaliapin of the Metropolitan Opera Company, an acknowledged musical authority and critic of accepted discrimination.

Suddenly from the flies above the stage rose

Suddenly from the flies above the stage rose a voice of rare quality, sounding the melodic strains of the angel's song. The singer was invisible. There was no such crass note in The Miracle as the introduction of an angel in the flesh. But the tone-wise Chaliapin knew that there was something fleshly behind that voice, something tangible and flawless that fitted perfectly into the musical pattern of his life.

Too aprly trained to let his enthusiasm run away with him, he awaited with comprehensive knowledge for the flaw which might betray the caroler as one of those tyros who approach perfection but just miss it by one uncontrollable fault. He drank in the liquid notes. Out they tumbled, clear and concise in tone and pitch and with clear diction, remarkably phrased, and without a let-down from the perfection that had captured his attention.

When the aria was concluded he had reached a decision. Here was a new star for the all-too-thinly populated musical firmament. The import of the show was lost upon him.

He must learn who this gifted singer was. Curiosity so tortured him that he left his seat before the act was concluded, and hastened to the back of the theater to learn what he could about his discovery.

And so did Chaliapin, the great, meet Jessica Dragonette, the beginner, a lyric soprano making her first professional appearance. And so began a siege of importuning by which Chaliapin hoped to lead this 100-pound won-

Turned Aside to
Was She Right?
Here Are the Facts

Canny little Jessica could not be lured by the promised pot of gold at the end of every vocal aspirant's rainbow, the opera. Romanticist, they called her. "She's a visionary," declared her few intimates. But little Miss Dragonette was five-feet and two inches of sound reasoning power. reasoning power.

Her interest in music had fixed her attention on the life of its stars. She had seen them scintillate for a few weeks each year, and then be forced into involuntary retirement, or brief concert tours, during the unproductive months when opera is out of season. Better 52 weeks of limited income, she thought, than a month or so of big salaries followed by a full during which one dissipated savings. Besides, opera meant sacrifice of the privacy which she treasures.

Jessica (above) in her favorite setting, indulging in her favorite occupation and (below) listening to herself sing being feted by those who fawn on celebrities, breaking into the solitude which, in Jessica Dragonette, amounts almost to a claustral mania.

An odd manifestation, that shyness. Literally millions love her, yet few ever have seen her. To most of her hearers, even to many who have transacted business with her, she remains the "great unknown," the Garbo of radio, who wants, above all else, to be alone. She lives modestly in a New York apartment, alone with her sister to whom she entrusts all of her affairs. Publicity and acclaim are hers by virtue of accomplishment. Yet she will have none of them. She could be photographed and interviewed, portraited and feled by the press and by sycophants who patronize the arts for the sake of fraternizing with the artists. But seclusion is her refuge to a point that is almost antiavowed haters of all sopranos. In private life she is aloof, ethereal and silent, a star of cold brilliance.

But whatever her characteristics along this line, she has proved conclusively that she was shrewd in turning her back on Chaliapin's proposal that under his guidance she adopt the opera and concert stage.

The picture which he painted for her was an alluring one. Under the aegis of the great basso, darling of the "Metropolitan crowd," life would present few obstacles for her. The pathway to instantaneous honors would be hers. She shook her blonde head in a definite "No!" as light blue eyes steeled with determination. The stage she would try, perhaps, as a bridge to her entry into radio, but the fields which her tempter described were not for her. Whether she was wise in the eyes of art, practicability can find no fault with her. She has been the outstanding example of durability in radio's brief history. Doubtless her income over the years has been in excess of those who would have made her one of their company, and as they face the retreat from fame she has not even yet attained the summit. The peak is still ahead for her. Further, she is supremely content in the field of her endeavors.

That her followers are equally content is radio lore. Probably in all the world there is no epidemic to equal in ferocity that of Dragonetteism. Her partisans are fiery in their support of her talent and personality, and any attack brings up a solid defense that would whither the rashest assailant.

Obviously, once a person has become a subject of "Queen Jessica," disloyalty becomes atrophied as a vice, Pretenders may come and go, but her throne refuses to tremble to their tread. Which is worthy of note in an enterprise where the warm zephyrs of approval are pone to change into frost-laden gales of dissatisfaction overnight.

Voice of the Listener

It's a Voo-de-Hoodoo

Dear VOL: Jamaica, N. Y. In reply to Bob S. Paulson, he claims that the Boswell Sisters' Heebie Jeebie Blues give him the fitters. Doesn't he know that at the start of a new program or a series of programs, the Bossells always sing the "Heebee Jorbie Blues" on their first broadcast, as a luck song? As for learning new songs, does he know Boswell fans swamp these famous sisters with requests for the good old songs?

Old or new songs, Connie, Vet and Martha can and will sing them as only this famous trio can, sweet, hot, slow, fast, torrid, sprinkled with that famous contagious Boswell rhythm and

H and S vs. A and A

Dear VOL: As I am a constant reader of RADIO GUIDE and also a good listener, I wish to say that I think the new team "Honeyboy and Sassafras" is far more entertaining than "Amos and Andy" have ever been. We would not fail to listen to them for anything. They are great. We like "Honeyboy" the better of the two, only he isn't heard enough during his program. Why not put them on the air in the evenings, so more people can enjoy their program? Mrs. Margaret Thiel

Dear VOL: Washington, D. C. Am a constant reader of your magazine and I agree with a reader in regards to "No Matinee for Kate." We want her in the evenings. I am a high school student and miss her program, as I cannot reach home before 3:45. She is a great favorite with all the girls at school, so please do what you can and let us hear her wonderful voice again, between 6 and 9 o'clock. It would be swell.

Why the Musicians' Union should ban Ray Noble and his orchestra from this country is a mystery to me. Ray, despite being a Britisher, has one of the finest bands anywhere, and to deny Americans the privilege of hearing him bedeny Americans the privilege of hearing him because of a few selfish rules, or rather, rulers, is carrying a good thing a bit too far. Does England ban the dozens of American outfits that play there each year? Maybe it is because he will outshine so many American crews. I believe he'll do just that. For your own convincing, listen to his recordings of, "You Ought to See Sally on Sunday," "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee" or better yet, our own famous "Teer Rag."

On the whole I have found radio to be just about perfect, and I have never made any complaints before, but the strain of choosing between listening to my two "number-one-favorites," Ben Bernie and Bing Crosby, is more than I can endure very long.

And the hour from 8-9 (CST) on Thursday,

In Appreciation

Kansas City, Mo. I want to congratulate you on this fine magazine, the RADIO GUIDE. It has so much to interest every radio fan. Will the children's program, "The Adventures of Helen and Mary" be back on the air this fall? It was such a fine program. I would like to mention "Happy Hollow," the B. C. program over KMBC Columbia broadcast as one of the really fine and human programs of the air. We like and enjoy so many it's impossible to mention them.

For children, Frank Buck is to be congratu-lated on his fine programs. They are both en-tertaining and educational. Orphan Annie and Skippy are both so full of horrors children have nightmares listening to them. Couldn't they change? Thank you. Mrs. C. D. Ward

Babe Ruth, Sustan of Swat, as he appeared before the microphone for his recent series of broadcasts.

But a close look at this mister mechanic's now is the series of the whole field which had not a covered that he is a come can had not a covered that he is a continue to the pictory case on every product in the factory.

But a present of the whole field which had not been a had not b

Base Ruth places the game. This broad forehead, wide head solid side-face and full upper by make a deadly serie is face, with smiles all over it. It is an executive face, a management face and yet one that can play a solo part when that is 6's place.

Evidently he uid not propage for a technical life, for a mechanics work, or for eag neering.

In last he could not have passed the last-named course of studies. The end of his nose inficites the fact that higher mathematics, the usual college demanded mastery of cike us and mathematical equations, is out of his scope.

Yet, a first-class machinist, factory superintendent, or agriculturist he certainly as lit have been Born to the rib-ticking prank is Lula Belle, who accoursed as the untitiored, buxom backwoods buffour gives and ences their file of diaphragm-distribung haghs. Coarse antics belie Myrtle Coopers true self. Born in the mountains of North Carolina and taised in the gename hilbully atmosphere of the Blie Kitge Mountains, she knows the rushingal as few could. And these are hit a few of the individual stars. The show is replete with them, so much so in fact that it must seem like rank first itism to single them on the ling groups there is also infinite variety, and only a low of them can be not oned.

What do we do when we go out for a good time? Well, I guess we're just like the postnin on his day off. What we like to do best is go to snows. You'd think Jack would get enough of that sort of thing but he never does. Sometimes we'll go to the treater and then top it off with a midnight make. We like the radio too; but Jack never cares to usen to what other could list are doing. He doesn't want to feel that he is being influenced by the work of others.

Behind the Music

Night in 1924. Within one month of the year 1925 he composed the Mississippi Suite. The following year witnessed his Three Shades of Blue, while Blue Flame and Metropolis followed in order in 1927 and Metropolis followed in order in 1927 and 1928. Grofe's most important work in 1929 was Free Air. The masterful Grand Canyon Suite was inscribed in 1930, and his tribute to Notre Dame's beloved football coach, Knute Rockne, in 1931. Tabloid, which is still new to the listening public, was written in 1932, and Ferde Grofe is now putting the finishing touches on his Madison Square Garden Suite, a fascinating combination of the six-day bicycle race, the rodeo, championship bout, circus day and political convention. The groundwork of the latter suite was created in 1933 . . . a consistent record of one major work each year.

What will the present year bring from

What will the present year bring from the master hand of Grofe? Perhaps sevthe master hand of Grofe? Perhaps sev-eral compositions to climax all previous efforts; for the entire newspaper suite Tabloid was conceived and written in the brief space of two weeks! Ferde Grofe is happily married, has two children, a boy of five and a girl of two. His wife has been the recipient of many beauty prizes, and chose marriage rather than a proflered contract with Earl Carrol. Yet, on the surface, there is not the difference between this and the average American family. Mr. Grofe does not believe that fame demands eccentric

"I'm just an ordinary mortal," he says, "with everyday hobbies—golfing, hiking, fishing and hunting."

His ultimate ambition is to be a gentleman farmer with a small foothill estate near the water. There will be cows, near the water. There will be cows, chickens, pigs, crickets, and a pipe-organ "for my own pleasure," he says. "I have always wanted to learn to play the pipe-organ and have never had the time."

Ferde Grofe's orchestra is now playing at the Book-Cadillac hotel. Detroit, Michigan. Broadcasts are sustaining over station WJR, locally, at 10:30 p. m. EST Mondays and Saturdays at 10 p. m. Tuesdays and at 11:30 p. m. Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Amateur Murder

Turner remarked to his assistant, Hartnett. Outside in the hall was the hum of conversation made by the orderly relief workers. Hartnett started for the front door to let in the first of the lineup... "Keep still—everybody!"

Hartnett stopped dead, chilled by the menace of that voice. The back door of the office had been thrust open violently. Morris and Hymie strode in. Cohen had the lower part of his face covered with a handkerchief. Each carried a gun.

"Don't make a moye!" snapped Morris Cohen excitedly, the gun in his hand beginning to tremble. The more experienced Hymie eyed each of the three men in the office; said nothing; marched over to Rawls' desk and stretched out a hand for the cash box.

"What's the idea?" shouted Rawls, He jumped to his feet and grabbed at the box.

"Get back!" snarled Hymie finger tight.

"Get back!" snarled Hymic, finger tight-

"Get back!" snarled Hymie, finger tightening on trigger menacingly.

Hartnett's wits recovered from the paralysis which had gripped the office, Gulping he gasped:

"Don't start anything, Rawls! This is a stickup! Give 'em what you've got!"
Rawls backed away.

"Now," said Hymie, swift but cool in every word and motion, "get down on the floor—all of you!" Awkwardly, clumsily,

Policeman Hastings, as he looked when he served his country during the World War the men started to go through the unfa-miliar motions of spreading themselves face down on the floor. "Make it snap-py!" Toes scraped and bodies flopped as

Bullet Foils Ruse

But the quick-witted Hartnett made a desperate effort to outwit the two ban-dits, right under their guns. As he slid to the floor behind a desk, he yanked a telephone with him.

A gun spoke once. The bullet thudded into the wall an inch above Harmett's shoulder. He dropped the telephone as if snoulder. He dropped the telephone as it it had suddenly turned red-hot—and by doing so, undoubtedly saved his life.

Between them, Hymie and Morris scooped up the money; looked about swiftly for more. Morris crossed to the other desk.

other desk.

And then the rear door burst open, for the second time. But now it was no robber, but a blue-coated policeman who stood momentarily framed there, a Colt police special shining in his hand. For Policeman Joseph Hastings, patroling his beat on the pier, had heard the sound of the shot fired at Hastings. He had seen Hymie, but not Morris.

As the policeman dashed into the office, the masked Morris fired. Hastings dropped to the floor. But even as Hymie jumped, ran around his prostrate frame to the door, Hastings shot twice at Morris Cohen. Morris, following Hymie, began to run too.

But Hastings wasn't hurt. His drop to the floor had been a purely strategic one—to enable him to escape lead, and to give him an edge on his standing adversaries. Now he leaped up and Morris collided with him.

For a desperate moment the two men grappled for each other's gun. They twisted, squirmed, clutched—locked tight in a writhing clinch.

Then Hastings wrenched his right hand away—squeezed the trigger of his Colt. Again the office racketed to a shot. The half-masked bandit stumbled to his knees.

A Janitor's Heroism

A single shot came from the doorway

A single shot came from the doorway. The policeman straightened. His features twitched. The gun fell from his hand He pitched head-first to the floor.

Now Morris staggered to his feet. The handkerchief was slipping down from his anguished face. With an effort he snatched up the policeman's gun and ran, stepping over Hastings and lurching after his companion. Already, red splotches were beginning to stain his shirt.

At the door a man barred his way—65-year-old George, Stumpf, a janitor employed by the Bureau of Streets, who had dropped his broom and rushed to the office at the sound of the shooting.

"Get out of the way you—I" cursed Morris Cohen, jamming one of the two guns he carried into the older man's ribs. Stumpf jumped to one side. Cohen, without pausing, hurled one of the guns into the janitor's face and ran headlong down the ramp to the main floor of the pier. Stumpf snatched up the revolver, which had fallen to the floor, and ran to the top of the ramp, firing after the retreating bandit until the gun jammed.

At the entrance to the Pier, a Ford car was just pulling away from the curb when the two bandits, Hymie in the lead, sprang on the running-board, guns still in hand.

And Radio Functions

"Drive like hell" rasped Hymie.

Obeying the guns, the driver stepped on the gas; soon the car was lost in side streets. It seemed as if the cop-killers had made a clean getaway. Yet scarcely had they left the Pier when the police radio voice began.

"Attention, all cars. Attention all cars. Be on the lookout for two white men, armed with revolvers. They shot a police officer in a robbery at Navy Pier. Last seen in a commandeered Ford touring car driving west on Grand Avenue.

And then a special call.

Attention, cars 132, 140 and 56. Attention, cars 132, 140 and 56. on the to Navy Pier. Cars 132, 140 and 56. on at once to Navy Pier. Cars 132, 140 and 56. on at once to Navy Pier.

A few minutes passed ... minutes in A few minutes passed ... minutes in which police squads worked with the clicking efficiency of crack football teams ... minutes in which Policeman Hastings died.

minutes in which Policeman Hastings died. And again, radio spoke:

"Attention, all cars. Attention, all cars. Apprehend for murder, two white men. Number one, about 35 or 36, 3 feet 5, weight 145-150. Wore no coat or hat, white shirt, black trousers. Dark complexion. Carried special police revolver, taken from officer. Believed wounded. Number two, about 25-30, 5 feet 7, weight 150. Dark, swarthy complexion, black hair combed straight back. No coat or hat. Wore bluish-green trousers, khaki shirt. Carried blue steel revolver. Believed wounded also, probably in left hand. These men shot and killed police officer during robbery on Navy Pier."

Hymie Sinnenberg, still wanted by the police in connection with the killing of Policeman Hastings Steadily, radio continued to marshal the patrol-cars, throwing a cordon around the north and west parts of the city. Police doubted the killers had turned south through the crowded Loop, and they hoped that prompt action would block the main arteries of escape before the fugitives could realize that an extensive pursuit had been organized against them so swiftly. The number of the commandeered Ford was turned in by an observant citizen, and again radio spoke:

swiftly. The number of the commandeered Ford was turned in by an observant citizen, and again radio spoke:
"Attention, all cars... Attention, all Chicago Avenue. Keep sharp lookout..."

This radio message was still in the ears of Sergeant Harry Lyons, in a 36th district patrol-car, when he saw a man run across an alley and into the back door of a garage. The runner was hatless, coatless and—red blotches were on his shirt. Quickthinking Lyons stopped the car, ordered one of his men to phone the news to the radio-bureau, sent another scurrying around to cover the front of the garage.
Lyons reserved for himself the dangerous task of following the possibly armed slayer into the garage.
"At least I've got a trail to follow," he murmured. For bright drops of blood led mto the garage. They led directly across the concrete floor to a big parked car, Inside the car, Morris Cohen looked up wearily when Lyons shouted:

The Futile Alibi

"Put your hands up-and come out of

"Put your hands up—and come out of there!"

"All right, officer," said Cohen. He had been trying to stem a trickle of blood from his side. "I had a fight with a man in the alley, and he beat me up. I ran in here to get away from him. Look, I'm all blood," For Morris, forgetting radio, did not connect Lyons with the killing of Hastings—could not believe that the law had caught up with him so quickly. He thought that Lyons had followed him into the garage merely because his entry might have seemed suspicious. So he tried to bluff. But Lyons' keen eyes noticed that the back seat was out of place.

Behind it, Lyons found Hastings' 38 Colt police special!

Gone now were Morris' dreams of a barber shop of his own, bought with the prize money of violence. One by one, every witness in the case identified him. He was tried—convicted—sentenced to the electric chair and, on October 13 at midnight, he was executed.

In less than two months Morris Cohen had gone from barber chair to electric chair. His pal, Hymie, has not been caught—yet. But just as he was on the point of death, Morris solemily prophesied that he will be caught, some day.

"You can never beat crime," he said with a wan smile. "And yet—I might have had a chance but for radio: like it was brought out at my trial. Those calls kept the police one step ahead of me. Hymie may keep clear for awhile yet—but as sure as he's alive and I die tonight, he'll be caught. Just like I was."

Those were almost the last words he spoke, before he died in the electric chair.

RICHARD HIMBER

As He Appears Under the

By Fred Kelly

qually at home making melody or making magic, Richard Himber, youngest of the important orchestra leaders, has what is termed Radiodom's most valuable fingers. That's rather a broad statement, but it's true, Disregarding the fact that Himber directs the twenty men on his Studebaker Champions broadcasts with his fingers, that he coaxes solo and ensemble passages from his instrumentalists by the deftness and dexterity of them, Dick is a violin soloist who ranks with the best; an expert rifle shot; a marvel at sleight-of-hand; a crack billiards performer; and a master of the piano and the celeste.

who ranks with the best; an expert rifle shot; a marvel at sleightof-hand; a crack billiards performer; and a master of the piano and the celeste.

Himber halls from Newark, N. J., where he studied violin, harmony in all its branches, and piano; this before he had been graduated from public school! It's just as well that he did get his theoretical musical education early, because Dick left home before he was fifteen, and joined Sophie Tucker's vaudeville act.
In the eleven years that have followed, Himber has at some time or other (1) directed a dance band, (2) performed as a vaudeville violinist, (3) waved the bation at the head of a small symphony group and (4) played in the pits of hundreds of different theaters.
About five years after he had joined Miss Tucker's act, Dick applied at the New York Paramount Theater for a job as pit violinist. The Paramount then was the best-paying job in the business. Everyone laughed when Dick came to New York cold, and informed his few friends that he was going to get a job there.

Himber carted his violin down to the Paramount, played, sang and danced for Paul Ash—and got the job! He held it for a year, Then a young curly-haired lad with a flair for singing, by name Vallee, was booked into the Paramount, and brought his own band with him. When Rudy Vallee came, Himber went.

That is Himber went. . right up to Vallee and asked for a job in his orchestra. That was impossible, Rudy explained to the pleasant-faced, red-headed kid. But if Dick wanted to stick around. Vallee was at the peak of his fame, Himber was his orchestra manager, booking all of the various Vallee orchestras and running Rudy's office force in addition. The yen to become a meastro on his own, always latent in Himber, was fired by the success of Rudy, and after a four-year association with Vallee, Himber knew he had to have something different in his band fit was to amount to anything at all. In searching for a novelty identification, he hit upon the idea of using the harp between dance numbers, so that a
